

Fitness - August 16, 2004

Don't stress out. Over training can lead to suppressed immune function and exposure to infections. Trying too many things at once or attempting new or harder activities can lead to physical stress and therefore failure. Such stress may influence your immune system. Choosing activities you enjoy and can do consistently can improve your exercise adherence and immune function.