

Fitness - Dec 6, 2004

Don't exercise with a fever. Fever (a body temperature above 98.6 degrees Fahrenheit) signifies you are doing battle with a virus. Exercising under these conditions increases risk of dehydration, heatstroke, and even heart failure. Wait for your fever to subside prior to resuming moderate physical activity.